UNIVERSIDADE NOVA DE LISBOA

Universidade NOVA de Lisboa was founded in 1973 and has currently more than 19000 students, 1646 teachers and 707 non-faculty staff. Proud of its youth as one of the most recent public universities within the Lisbon metropolitan area, NOVA spans through three municipalities, shortly, in four.

UNIVERSIDADE
NOVA DE LISBOA

NOVA integrates 41 scientific research centres funded by the Fundação para a Ciência e a Tecnologia - FCT (Portuguese Foundation for Science and Technology), including 3 associated laboratories (in partnership with other institutions).

The excellent quality of research in many areas is also a cornerstone in the international culture of NOVA. Besides intense exchanges in the European space, NOVA also develops cooperation ties with Brazil and Portuguese-speaking countries, Latin-American countries as well as other regions of the world.

The university is also actively involved in cooperation actions promoted by the Portuguese Government, in particular with North-American universities, such as the University of Texas at Austin (UTA), the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) and the Carnegie Mellon University (CMU), namely in master's courses and doctoral and research programmes.

The singularity of the Universidade NOVA de Lisboa project lies in its respect for the individuality of each Academic Unit, each having acquired its image and prestige within the freedom, diversity and tolerance that have been the guidelines of NOVA. One further aim of the project is the strengthening of the cohesion between units in order to take the best possible advantage of the synergies that can thus be generated and developed.

This clear option for a unique but diversified identity, working not only as a network of institutions but also of projects, people and resources, characterizes NOVA as a university that is open to the world and willing to take part in the challenges presented by the 21st century.

THE CITY OF LISBON

HISTORY

Legend tells us Lisbon was founded by Ulisses during one of his famous journeys, but science has proved that as far back as Neolithic times it was already well populated, and to this day the footprints of one of the region's first visitors – the dinosaurs – still stand proud. The name comes from “Olissipo”, which has its origins in the Phoenician words “Allis Ubbo”, meaning “enchanting port”.

Lisbon is the capital city of Portugal and lies on the north bank of the Tagus estuary where it broadens to enter the Atlantic Ocean. It is the westernmost city in mainland Europe and lies more or less in the centre of the country: approximately 300 km from the Algarve in the south, and 400 km from the northern border with Spain. Approximately 600 000 people live in Lisbon. However, if one includes the various satellite towns, Lisbon is Portugal's largest city and its cultural, administrative, commercial and industrial hub.

Built on seven hills overlooking the Tagus river, the very soul of the city, Lisbon, the muse that inspired the great maritime discoveries, stands proudly at the Atlantic Ocean. The memories of this golden age – when Lisbon became the capital city of the realm and one of the most famous and cosmopolitan centres of 16th century Europe, are etched in stone, in the Torre de Belém, Mosteiro dos Jerónimos and Padrão dos Descobrimentos, which have perpetuated the memory of that period and been classified as world heritage sites.

Either in or near Lisbon you will find whatever you are looking for: beaches, countryside, mountains and areas of historical interest. Lisbon is a historic capital, a potpourri of unusual character and charm, where 800 years of cultural influences mingle with modern trends and life styles creating spectacular contrasts.
